Kristiane Demann:

Handwritten German text in cursive script on aged paper. The text is arranged in approximately 10 lines, written in a fluid, connected hand. The ink is dark, and the paper shows signs of age with some yellowing and slight wear at the edges. The text appears to be a personal message or a short letter.

The above was written in the German language. The translation to English is on the next page.

The following is that of Kristiane Demann's entry in George E. Demann's autograph book:

"Never will I curse against, when the one who hates me curses me.

Never will I try to hurt the one who tries to hurt me.

I will meet him kindly, won't threaten him, when he threatens me.

If he scolds, I will bless: it ist he Lord's commandment.

Your loving mother Kristiane Demann."

There is a discrepancy. George E. Demann's mother's first name was Johanna and not Kristiane. George's father's name was Christian. The following email exchange could explain this discrepancy:

Hi Alicia,

You'll find the transcription attached. The reason it was so hard to decipher was because it was partially written in Old German and/or Plattdeutsch.

Niels was so kind to transfer it into modern German writing, yet some of the words are really old fashioned German.

You'll find my translation into below - and you're very welcome to have look at it and correct it. I tried to keep the old fashioned language but I'm not sure if everything works in English as well.

Hope that's ok.

Lanndon City - 2-18-88

Flowers, lift their sweet faces, to
to the unclouded sky;
And breathe of love, hope, & constancy,
Then heed their message, from this sacred spot. — They breathe to you a prayer —
"Forget me not"
Very Truly your friend,
Fannie W. Somers

The following is one more of Kristiane Demann's entries in George E. Demann's autograph book:

Kristiane Demann:

The image shows a page of handwritten text in German cursive script. The text is written on aged, slightly yellowed paper. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the late 19th century. The text is arranged in approximately 12 lines, filling most of the page. The ink is dark, and the overall appearance is that of a personal entry in an autograph book.

The above was written in the German language. The translation to English is on the next page.

The following is that of Kristiane Demann's entry in George E. Demann's autograph book:

"Redlake Falls [...] 87

There on this mountain

there is a golden house

there, every morning and every evening

three beautiful virgins look out

One is called Susanne

the other one Anne Marie

I mustn't name the third one

she shall be mine
